Osipov Balalaika Perform At WC

By JOHANNA MEADORS

On its first United States tour, the Osipov Balalaika Orchestra from Moscow appears on the Winthrop College campus Tuesday, October 21.

Joined by Bolshoi Opera stars and Russian dancers, the group will perform its folk festival in Byrnes Auditorium at 8:00 p.m.

Among the singing stars from the Bolshoi stage will be Valentina Levtova, Ivan Petrov, and Alexander Vedenkovskiy. Considered three of the Soviet Union's finest voices, they will be heard in opera arias as well as folk songs. Airborne dancers from the Russian ballet will include Lily Novgorodova and Yuri Mitrova.

An appearance on the Ed Sullivan Show (Sept. 28) and the U. S. tour for the Soviet Balalaika Group. Before its arrival in the states, the 71-member company presented four special performances in Moscow's leading concert halls. In addition to its triumphs, the group has received great reviews and packed houses from its tours in Australia, Great Britain, and West Germany. The Osipov Balalaika Orchestra is known for having a broad repertoire. Victor Dubrovsky, conductor of the celebrated group, says, "Our repertoire extends to Russian classics such as Glinka's 'Russian Fantasy,' Tchaikovsky's 'Lullaby,' Mussorgsky's 'Night on Bald Mountain,' and excerpts from Mussorgsky's 'Khovantchina' and Stravinsky's 'Petruška.' Of the European classics we play Schumann's 'Träumerei' and Brahms' Hungarian Dances. The dances are especially exciting."

Dubrovsky pondered over the problem of an exactly right solo number for the group's 15-city American tour. "In the South we will play 'Rite'." The orchestra, founded in the 1880's, is composed of folk instruments which include six sizes of the balalaika, domras, gusli, ancient horns and pipes and accordions. The modern balalaika, a species of guitar, is a three stringed instrument with a triangular body. The balalaika, the very essence of Russian national music, is a descendant of the domra which is a descendant of the gusli which can be traced back to about the 10th century in the folk music of the ancient European-Asiatic lands.

October 15 Marks Moratorium Day

BY JOHANNA MEADORS

The October 15th Moratorium was observed by hundreds of thousands of people throughout the country, but the colleges and universities remained the center of Moratorium activities. For the most part, protest and the Vietnam War was voiced peacefully.

Excursion of the war protesters took various forms. There were anti-war speeches, the reading of long lists of the Vietnam War dead, prayers, debates, marches, and vigils to observe the Moratorium.

At approximately 6:45 a.m. the reading of the list of war dead on the steps of Dinkins and the University of South Carolina was begun by a student dressed in black. Beside her stood a drummer. Thus, the Moratorium Day activities were started on the campus of Winthrop College.

There were approximately 100 active supporters of the Moratorium who wore the black armbands.

Program Sponsors WC Hockey Sports Tourney

The annual Hockey Sports Day Tournament was held Saturday, Oct. 11, at Winthrop. Mrs. Ruth Sturgis, director of the Winthrop Hockey program.

Appalachian State University, Coker College, Converse College and Winthrop were the four schools participating in the tourney this year.

Winthrop eliminated Coker from play 2-0 in the first game while Appalachian defeated Converse 6-3 to earn the right to face Winthrop in the finals.

The tough Appalachian team defeated the Winthrop ladies 4-1 to win the tournament and the Hockey Sports Day Plaque.

The consolation game went to Coker after a hard 2-1 win over Converse.

Co-chairman of the Hockey Day program at Winthrop, Diane Worley and Nancy Smith, said they were "pleased with the attendance but were disappointed at Winthrop's close loss."

"I thought we played an excellent game," said Mrs. Sturgis. "Appalachian was a good job to hold them to only four points."

Senate Passes Bill

The Winthrop Senate met Wednesday October 15 at 5:30 p.m. in Dinkins to present two new bills and to revise on another bill.

A bill was presented to amend the section in the student handbook concerning visits to hotels, motels, and private residences. The proposed amended bill would read as follows:

"Students are permitted to visit in motels, hotels, and private residences. Both the Student Government Association and the college administration reserve the right to take action if, in their opinion, a student's behavior at any time reflects discredit on the college."

A student is expected to conduct himself in accord with acceptable standards of good taste, as well as with regulations of the community.

After much discussion this bill was tabled until a future date.

A second bill was introduced to be revised on. Due to a misinterpretation of the constitution at the last Senate meeting, a bill concerning a readiness requirement for several campus officers was read in error.

For the second time Senate passed this bill and required that SGA President and Vice-President, Judicial Board Chairman, Senate President, Committee of Inquiry Chairman, House Presidents and Campus co-ordinator be to be resident students.

Honors Program Students Comment On Specially Offered Courses

(Ed. Note—This is the second in a series of two articles concerning the Honors Program.)

BY MARSHA PRUDEN

The Honors Program at Winthrop College, promising a superior education for the superior student, is now in its fourth year. With its small classes, class discussion, and close student-faculty relationship, the Program sounds wonderful. But what do the Honors students themselves think of the Honors Program?

When asked the question "What do you think about Honors?" most students answered favorably.

A Junior Math major who has taken 18 hours of honors and is taking 6 more said that she definitely liked Honors. "I love my math class," she said, "because we have such a wonderful relationship with the professor."

Another Junior, who attended school in Cuba, New Mexico, and Columbia, S. C. before entering Winthrop, was invited to join the Honors Program last year and is now taking 4 Honors courses.

"I love it because it's so individualized. You have more freedom to express yourself."

A sophomore who was also invited into the Honors Program last year was equally enthusiastic.

She said "I like my Honors English course better than my other courses because I don't feel pressured. We get graded on class discussion and I know if I read the assignments and think about them I'll do all right."

Two freshmen who are both taking 9 hours of honors courses said that they thoroughly enjoyed Honors. One, a Biology major, said that she learned more in Honors classes. "I like the small classes and it's not really any more work," she commented.

The other added, "I wish I could take all my courses Honors."

However, there are some students who do not like Honors, or at least some Honors courses.

A senior who took an Honors Calculus course last year said "I didn't like it because it was taught way over my head. I enjoyed the class, but I didn't get anything out of it. However, she said that she liked the Honors idea. "I think it would be good in anything except Honors."

"The only one I got anything out of was the seminar. It was the only one where I didn't have to feed back information. If you didn't agree with a professor's ideas, you really got it. In the Honors Seminar, though, the teacher could say something and the more we were

It down, the better he liked it."

Perhaps the most severe criticism of the Honors Program came from a Freshman. She, too, said "I don't like it."

"They told us you couldn't lose. You'd have a small class, the best teachers and it wouldn't be any harder. I'm taking two Honors courses, Sophomore English and Biology. English is just right now, but I'm thinking biology. We have a different book and harder tests than the regular classes. There's more pressure and more tension in class because you're competing with the top people. I regret taking biology and I'll probably regret English. I think the college should give the freshmen a more realistic idea of the Honors Program."

This sampling of opinion has shown that most Honors students are satisfied with their Program. But even if there are only a few complaints, perhaps these should be investigated to see what could be done to make the Honors Program even better.

Student Leaders Express Opinions On Allowance Of Alcohol On Campus

(Editor's note: The following is a student opinion poll taken by feature editor, Sarah Pomer. Since this issue has been a large one at other colleges we wanted to see how Winthrop campus leaders felt about it. Presently Winthrop does not allow alcoholic beverages on campus.)

Question—How do you feel about allowing alcoholic beverages on the Winthrop campus; for example beer or "hard" liquor?

Dorcas Graham, Judicial Board Chairman—"I am not sure that we should all of a sudden allow alcoholic beverages in the room; perhaps we should build up to this by first allowing alcoholic beverages at college functions, then maybe we could consider having it in the student center, and then maybe in the rooms. What about the problems of allowing girls under 18; below 21 drinking them and buying them. If it can be worked out successfully then I am in favor of giving it a try, because, things evidently can get no worse."

Bea Wells, Senate President—"I don't feel that Winthrop at this time is ready for drinking in the rooms. I do think that there will have to be some statement one way or other or some rule change this year. Senate will have to do something. I think there is an alternative in allowing drinking at college functions, but I do not feel that drinking in the rooms should be allowed this year."

Frances Jones, Winthrop Interfaith Council President—"Moral-ally it is not something you can legislate. It is very evident that girls have got liquor in their rooms, and beer too. I don't think that any policy we come up with can change that, the girls are going to keep it in their rooms. This is something a girl is going to have to decide for herself. No rule that we can make can legislate a girl's morals."

Hollace Williams, Student Government Association President—"As a personal opinion I am not in favor of having alcoholic beverages on the Winthrop campus. The reason that I don't is because I just don't think alcohol is a necessary part of campus and, for instance, in the dorms is good for studying. I don't think they'd mix."

Tricia Jones, Junior class Senator and chairman of Rules and Regulations committee, of Senate—"I feel that the best possible way to handle the question is to thoroughly study it. We are now on the Rules and Regulations Committee trying to see what Winthrop is ready for as a college, an individual college, and what would be the best system to set up here, for the sake of the Students, faculty and the community in which we belong."

Jane Parris, Lee Wicker Vice President—"I do feel if we keep the rule about liquor at Winthrop we ought to find a way to enforce it, however I do not know what this could possibly be since students are allowed to lock the doors of their rooms. If there is any rule about liquor at Winthrop I think that it should be maybe that the canteen would serve beer on tap which would not be allowed to be taken back to the room, or out of the student center, because I feel that liquor in the actual dormitory rooms would present too many problems."

Lillian Peoples, President Protom of Senate—"I am against liquor in the dorms because I think the rule as it is may not be enforceable. I think there needs to be some kind of real controlling liquor in our dorms because so many people have gone off to college who aren't used to being exposed to liquor, and aren't mature enough to handle the situation when they are exposed to it."

Gay Mathis, House Councilor on a Freshman Hall in Kate Wofford, also Sophomore Class Senator—"The problem of drinking on campus has really presented a big problem to Winthrop College, more so this year than ever before. Our rule is that we do not have a wet campus, that is the rule of the SGA. I feel that this rule is not being enforced. I feel that if you're going to have a rule it ought to be enforced."
